

Jackdaw news

Over the past week, Jackdaws have been completing NFER tests on Reading, Spelling, Punctuation and Maths. These tests are an invaluable way of identifying next steps for the class as a whole and for each individual child. Indeed the results are already bearing fruit as we noticed an issue with recognising possessive pronouns which then became a focus in this week's lessons.

In between these assessments we have been really focusing on science with a look at what fossils are. We were astonished to discover they are not what they seem and why they'd be useless if we wanted to extract DNA to make our very own Jurassic Park. Have a chat with your children and they should be able to explain the processes involved to fossilise organic matter.

We have also been practising hard in preparation for the upcoming Christmas performance on the 14th of December. I have been really impressed by Jackdaw's efforts. It is no easy feat to learn a song off by heart, to sing it in a different language is truly exceptional.

Thank you to all those who came to Bawburgh School's Christmas Fete. It was a great day and we raised lots of money which will go to supporting the school in the future.

Next week:

Swimming: We have a Christmas fun session this week. Please remember that each child needs a hat.

Christmas Performance Outfit

Could I ask that children bring in a Christmas jumper for the performance on Friday? If they don't have one, no problem. If they have a favourite jumper that'll be fine, we'll make it festive with some tinsel.

Have a great week

Jackdaws
